

A cited research report, running in the background.

Ask a substantive question — the agent clarifies the brief, launches multiple search waves, actually reads the pages, and synthesizes a structured report where every claim cites its source.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

- ✓ Clarifying the brief. The agent nails down scope and angle before searching.
- ✓ Multi-source research. Several waves of parallel web searches.
- ✓ Pages actually read. Not a skim of snippets — full reading.
- ✓ Cited report. Every claim links back to its source.
- ✓ Web search in chat. For quick questions, no tool switch needed.
- ✓ History kept. Reopen a past research task with its sources, rerun it, or continue it in chat.

HOW IT WORKS

- 1 Ask your question
In plain language, like briefing an analyst.
- 2 The agent clarifies if needed
Zero to three targeted questions, or none at all.
- 3 The search waves run
Search, read, then targeted follow-up.
- 4 The cited report arrives
Structured, sourced, ready to share.

- Clarifies before it searches
- Reads pages, not snippets
- Every claim is sourced
